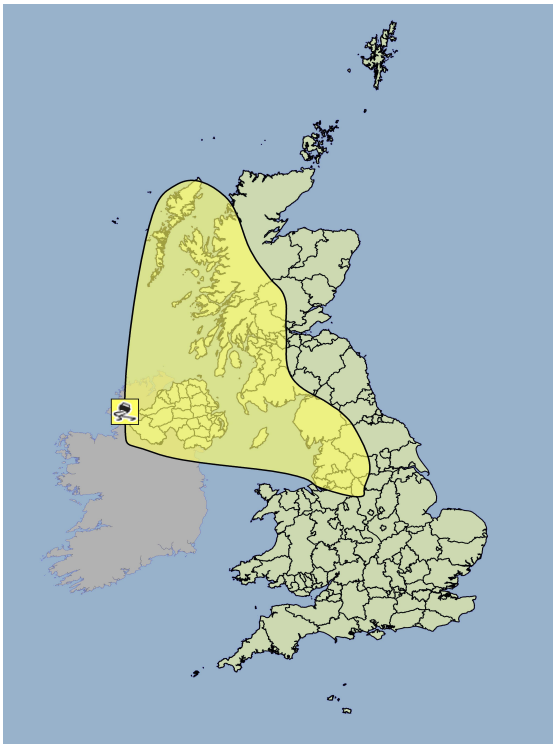
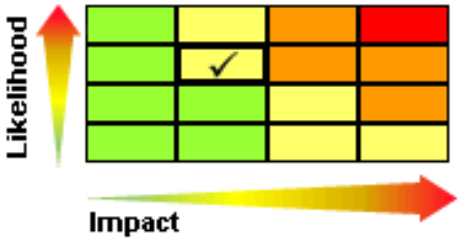
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Showers across Northern Ireland and northwest England will become less frequent and wintry than of late, tending to clear late in the night. Over western areas of Scotland, outbreaks of rain and snow, the latter mainly over hills, will likewise clear from the north during the night. In both cases, this will allow surface temperatures to fall, giving the risk of ice on untreated wet roads and pavements.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Ice

Valid from 20:50 on Sat, 17th Jan 2015 until 11:00 on Sun, 18th Jan 2015

Various areas of rain, sleet and snow will affect northwest Britain for a time tonight, followed by a late clearance in many places. This brings an increasing likelihood of icy stretches overnight and into Sunday morning.

This is an update to include western areas of Scotland, which also look likely to see some icy conditions.

The public should be aware of potentially treacherous driving conditions.
